Corinth Ranked in the Top 10 Places to Live in DFW

CORINTH, TX – The Dallas Morning News recently published a study that determined the best places to live in North Texas. Residents were polled about what they value most in their neighborhood and the results narrowed down 11 key quality-of-life characteristics that home buyers consider when choosing where to settle.

Corinth placed as the 8th most desirable place to live in the metroplex among the more than 300 neighborhoods ranked. The City was rated highly for safety, pet-friendliness, access to parks, and growth in economic development.

“The City is making a conscientious effort to support growth and development that is consistent with the community’s values and vision, and ensure the integrity, safety and small-town atmosphere that the community is well-known for,” said Lee Ann Bunselmeyer, Acting City Manager.

Locally-owned eateries and small businesses owners will soon be accompanied by additional development projects that will bring about more office, shopping, and dining venues. Combined with the City’s rooted homespun atmosphere, the future establishments will only enhance the enticing elements of Corinth.
